Friends of the Jesus Revelation through the writing servant and writing prophet Jakob Lorber feel connected to all people of the world as creatures and children of one and the same Father. This Heavenly Father embodied Himself in Jesus Christ about 2,000 years ago and did not manifest Himself as Savior and Teacher until age 30, for three years. The spirit friends of the Divine Revelation recognize in this eternal declaration a new and great Word of God and aim to achieve a joyful mutual exchange.

The North pole.

In the Ur of the Chaldees, from which Abraham came, clay tablets have been found during excavations, which tell of an unknown brilliant beautiful red star. [Mars?] – also that the city had been regularly visited by UFOs [extraterrestrial visitors]. At the time, The Sumerians had a pagan high civilization and described the visitors as reptiles, who looked almost like humans, but with sharp minds.

The Biblical text Gen.6:1-4 is unfortunately misinterpreted and linked to extraterrestrials. “when men began to multiply on the earth, the sons of God saw that the daughters of men were fair, and they took to them wives of whomsoever they chose."

In the Household of God, vol. 1, we read that some of the descendants of the "patriarchs" took for themselves the wives of the lower valleys, for the mountain on which the "Sons of God" lived, [in the Caucasus], was very high.

The patriarchs at that time were tall people [3 meters high] and were seen as giants by the residents of the valley. Also after that – in the days of Adam and Hanoch, the sons of God saw that the daughters of the people in the valley were very beautiful. The giants lived in those days. Whether these 'giants' were the true sons of God is not certain here. The Bible does say that these giants came to the beautiful daughters, and they bore them children; these are the "greats" of the "foretime," renowned men.

Every year, our earth finds itself in a different universal space belt, with different spiritual influences. This is confirmed in the literature of Jakob Lorber. We Earthlings keep coming back for a while in the photon belt with an enormous luminosity. Some people suddenly become clairvoyant or clairaudient. We are also visited by unknown spaceships [which we call UFOs]. But isn't it true that we come close to these beings with our earth?

It was in the time before the flood of Noah, that the people in the valley - under the leadership of King Hanoch [the son of Cain] built great cities. Thus, on the great mainland that once existed there, where the Atlantic Ocean now covers its waters, the Fatherland was located: ATTA. Its mortal remains are at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, found by frogmen in their deep-sea exploration: they saw cobbled streets on the seabed, stairs, foundations of remaining ruins of very large structures. At the bottom of the Caribbean Sea at the Bermuda triangle, there is still a large Atlantic laboratory, with a huge rock crystal.

Predictions say that within the foreseeable future, Europe will submerge and 'Atlantis' will resurface!

It is said that a part of the human civilization at the time of Nor was not affected by the flood [also confirmed in Jakob Lorber!]. The deluge itself affected 1/3 of the then mainland of the earth, with 2/3 elsewhere on the earth still retaining their lives.

At that time, the people of Europe withdrew into subterranean caverns and were acquainted with extraordinary techniques which enabled them to build comfortable cities as far as their necessities required. [Compare also the major cities of Hanoch]

In Arizona is a crater with a diameter of 1200 meters and a depth of 174 meters.

'secret base Aliens':

Scott C. Waring found a bizarre stain on a remote island in Indonesia on May 13. He zoomed in, played with the colors, and now believes he has discovered a secret base of aliens.

In the book 'Earth and Moon' we can read a lot about the interior of the earth. Rudolf Steiner, the founder of Anthroposophy, spoke of a land beyond the far North Pole: Hyper-Borea... All Scandinavians know that every autumn, the wild animals move north from their regions and come back in the spring with shiny fur, well-fed.

The legend arises – 20 years ago two Swedish fishermen are said to have ended up in their fishing boat on the Arctic Ocean in an 'unknown beautiful land', at or below the edge of the mouth of the earth. On the return journey, the father succumbed, but the son took his father's kept journal with him into civilization, where their story was rewarded with incredible looks. The fishermen, son and father, had fallen into the worst blizzards and darknesses on the raging waters between the great high icebergs at the mouth of the earth. This is at 83 latitude.

It is said that the boy [Olaf] would have been locked up in an insane asylum for 28 years. A similar story [legend] is circulating about a pilot who flew over the North Pole. He ended up in an atmosphere he described as 'paradise', but his diary was later kept under lock and key on his return.

Lorber describes the beautiful red- purple Northern Lights because the magnetically whirling iceberg crystals are colored.

Byrd [24-10-1888] was a navy admiral in his days, and he was forbidden to speak about what he had experienced on his journey. He had seen mammoths walking. He also kept a diary and saw his compass acting strange at the 83rd latitude. From his plane, he saw a green valley, through which a stream meandered [seen from 900 meters!] and mountains with enormous forests and descending to 305 meters he clearly saw with binoculars a large mammoth [the giants of the north!] The temperature turned out to be 23 degrees. Byrd saw green grass at the South Pole in 1929. He saw animals like moose and the grass reached them to their bellies. Byrd himself called this the 'wonderland'. Byrd's descendants were forbidden from publishing their great ancestor's diary.

In Scandinavia, it is known that in the autumn many wild animals migrate north. In the spring they are seen returning with shiny coats. Most aircraft bypass this area due to instrumentation failures. The researcher Peary approached the North Pole and flew to the Melville Islands, where a warm wind was blowing.

A Norwegian fisherman was driven northwards by the wind in the arctic sea beyond the 'Frans Jozefland', and it was getting warmer...

Eskimosagas tell of a land of 'eternal light', where the sun never sets. This country is called ALTUMA. The apocryphal book of Enoch mentions something about a 'paradise' in/on our earth. And if so, this cannot be other than in the 'valley of the lucky', somewhere in the Middle East of Africa in the high altitude mountains.

Ufos

The number of sightings of UFOs is growing every year. People on ships have also seen UFOs emerge and disappear from the sea. Where do they come from? They can manifest in all sorts of forms, from one second to the next. And who causes the crop circles? UFOs! Yes, how do we explain again and again – here and there – the recurring crop circles on the waving cornfields?

People have been on watch at night, waiting to see whether a nearby grain field might be selected?

People often saw light phenomena above such a field and the illuminated spots were reminiscent of UFO's. It was as if one made the crop circle from there [the UFO] with a luminous beam. To the distress of the farmer, on whose land the phenomenon often occurs, with a lot of public interest. This was and is mainly in England. Did the UFOs leave a message? Once a UFO pilot was killed and dying on a Baltic Sea beach in Poland, he was found with a band around his wrist. He was taken to a hospital where he was washed and, stupidly enough, the band was removed from him - and then he died. He had 6 fingers on each hand and 6 toes on his feet.

Yet there was also a war at Gath; and there was a very tall man, who had six fingers on his hands, and six toes on his feet, twenty-four in number, and this one also was born in Rafa. And he taunted Israel; but Jonathan, the son of Shimea, David's brother smote him. [2 Sam.21:20]

The story goes around [from the apocryphal book of Enoch], that 'evil angels' - after 70 generations - will one day return to earth and raise the rulers from the east and march their troops to conquer the land of the chosen people and kill each other there. The epistles of Peter and Jude are said to point in that direction.

The apocryphal book of Enoch was discovered at a Coptic church in Ethiopia. In it, it is foretold: "In the days of great sin, the years shall be shortened, the moon shall not appear in time, as the stars and their moons. The fields will leave themselves.

"Look, just as there are phenomena in the natural world, of which one can say: this is close, but that is spatially distant, therefore there are also phenomena in the spiritual world in which an object retreats to a great distance. And no matter how great this in itself should be and consist of an innumerable spiritual multiplicity, it will still be easy to see at the spiritual distance as a single concrete being." [Spiritual Sun, part 2, chap. 66:13]

It follows that perception with the ear is much higher than perception with the eye. Seeing with the eye may surprise and delight one, especially when it comes to rare objects: but the message is only received with the ear. [Hidden Scriptures, chap. 6:12]

In "Earth and Moon", especially in chapter 7, Jesus describes the mouth opening at the North Pole, and the other opening at the South Pole. We have now discovered modern satellite recording techniques.

Jesus richly provides us with details in the New Revelation: 'The Earth, like any animal, has in her entire being an appropriate main mouth with whom she also takes the main nourishment [such as masses of ice and accompanying vegetation - the earth itself is one great 'animal' being!] [Earth and Moon, chap. 7:3]

The North Pole is an Earth body with a MOUTH and the South Pole with its corresponding "eliminary canal!" [7:5]

The Mouth Opening at the North Pole is quite large: its diameter at the outer edge, where the mouth begins in a funnel shape, is about 20-30 miles in diameter. It narrows there at the end to an eighth of a mile, to what extent [width] it then continues in this gullet [tunnel] to the stomach part of the earth. [7:6]

Around the Arctic rim, is an incredibly large dam-like accumulation of snow crystals and we encounter very high ice peaks there. [7:11].

Behold, there we have all the food, which she forcibly draws her magnetic earth mouth towards her, and propels it further to the stomach. [7:12]

Looking at the upper part of Greenland, the mouth opening of the northern earth is about 30 kilometers wide and it is usually also covered with mist and clouds.

At the South Pole, equally ice-free openings were found by a Russian plane, which certainly belongs to the anus opening of the South Pole, as Jesus described this to us via Lorber. The earth is not hollow and there are no people living under the earth. Different beings, yes, but they are nature beings [the goblin males and females and gnomes] all of whom have a [hierarchical] function to fulfill.

A group of Goblins.

What we do not see may exist!

All nature beings have their own area to maintain. In the north of the earth the sun never shines perpendicularly' it is always on the horizon, which also explains the effect of the aurora, and only a surface part of the interior of the earth in the north is slightly illuminated. On the other hand, the spiritual light of the sun does shine through the spiritual earth, so that it is never really dark there for the spirit beings.

The Antarctica - North Pole

The Moon

Astronomers from the Japanese space agency Jaxa have discovered a huge cave on the moon. The underground space under the Marius Hills on the moon, would be about 50 kilometers long and 100 meters wide and lies several tens to 200 meters below the surface. This is evident from analyzes of data collected by the Japanese space probe Selene. What the cave looks like inside is still unclear.

- Base of Colony

A lunar cave would be an ideal site for a lunar base because the inhabitants of such a cave would be protected from the extreme temperature fluctuations and harmful cosmic and UV rays from the sun.

Recently, plans have been made again to bring humans to the moon. Not only Japan, but also Russia, China, India, and the US have plans for a trip to the moon, or even establishing a colony.

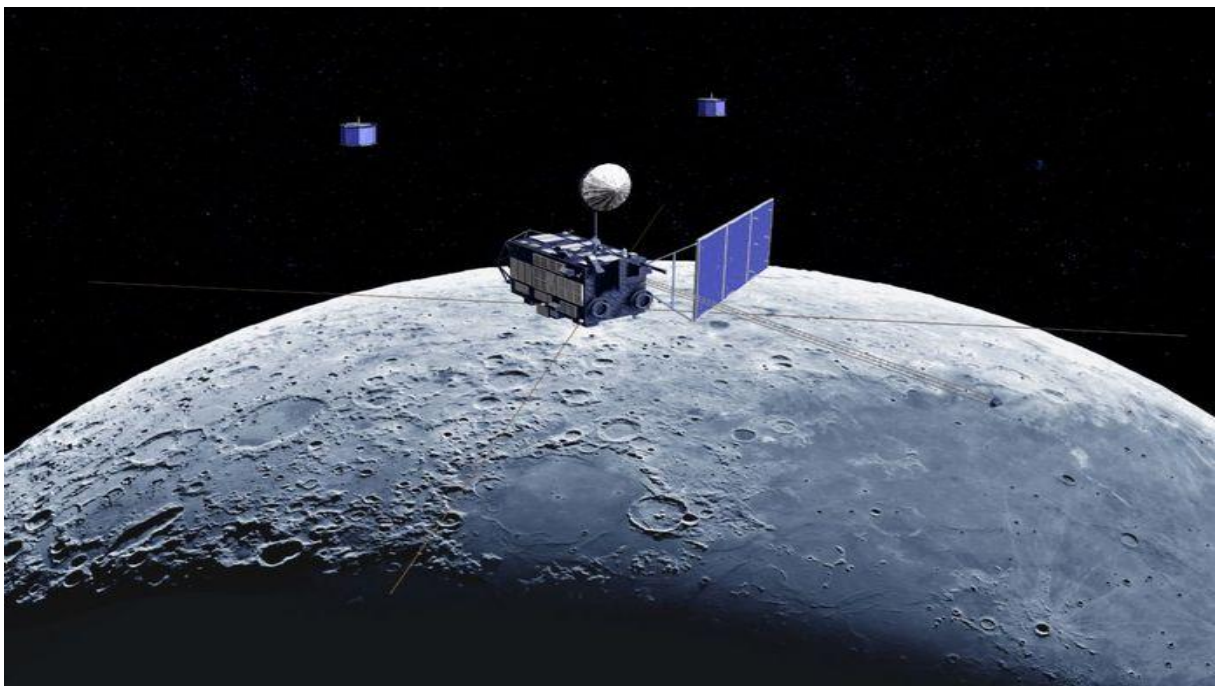

• Lavastreams

It has been known for some time, that there are caves on the moon. They originated about 3.5 billion years ago when the lunar surface consisted partly of liquid lava. As the moon cooled, the top of the lava solidified, but continued to flow below the surface for a while. Channels formed in the lava, which emptied as the lava flow decreased. This created a kind of tubes, in English: lava tubes, the moon caves.

On the lunar surface of the caves, often only a round opening can be seen. The Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter observation satellite has detected about 200 of them.

It is difficult to determine the size of the underground space through an opening in the roof of the cave. The Japanese used radio waves for this.

The American space agency NASA has previously made measurements of the moon's gravitational field, and several possible caves have also been discovered.

The Japanese spaceship Selene appears to be making a breakthrough. Scientists can use a special system to identify structures under the surface of the moon. At first, it was believed to have found a cave about fifty by fifty meters, but on closer inspection, it turned out to be a much larger area. It appears that the canyon also contains water or ice that could be converted back into fuel.

The 'sea of calm'

The frozen water is located at both the north and south poles of the moon. It resides in the coldest and darkest parts of the lunar surface. There is more water ice at the South Pole than at the North Pole; here it is mainly located in craters in which there is a permanent shade and it usually never gets warmer than -157 degrees Celsius. At the North Pole, the water ice is more spread out.

NASA:

Definitive evidence of Ice on the surface of the Moon.

Nasa reports that it has found definitive evidence of the presence of water ice on the lunar surface. According to NASA, it is the first time that researchers have directly observed definitive evidence of the presence of water ice.

WATER IN THE MOON, EVEN MORE THAN INITIALLY THOUGHT.

There is much more water on the moon than we thought, according to the analysis of tiny glass beads that formed during volcanic eruptions in the distant past. Samples of the glass beads were taken during the Apollo 15 and 17 lunar missions in the 1970s. Both missions landed in an area where volcanic activity had been recorded in the past. The pearls were formed when magma was ejected and crystallized on the surface, trapping water in the crystals. The scientists weren't sure, however, whether the Apollo samples were only in these locations or whether the aquiferous pearls could also be found in other old lava beds.

- The interior of the moon seems to contain a lot of water.

Although much of the moon's surface water has been mapped, it was not really known what the interior of the moon looked like, also because very few samples of the volcanic mantle rock were collected from the moon. In a new study published in the journal Nature Geoscience, scientists examined the Apollo samples more closely and looked for traces of water-bearing pearls elsewhere on the moon using current satellite images. They discovered that these types of volcanic deposits are everywhere and that the interior of the moon contains much more water than previously thought.

"The fact that the researchers saw signs of these glass beads everywhere shows that there was quite a bit of water in the moon during these volcanic eruptions," NASA scientists said.

- The moon isn't just bone dry.

Scientists always thought the moon was bone dry, but in 2008 they examined glass beads from the Apollo samples and discovered tiny traces of water for the first time. [that is, on the earth side] Then followed a veritable tidal wave of discoveries of water on the moon. In 2009, NASA crashed a rocket and satellite into a crater on the moon's south pole in hopes of finding more evidence of water. During the crash, data were measured indicating the presence of water ice and hydroxyl, a highly reactive molecule associated with water.

And in 2010, scientists examined other samples taken during the lunar missions and discovered even more traces of water in a mineral called apatite. Geologists then began to suspect that deeper lunar rocks could contain large amounts of water. If you were to put all of the water inside the moon, you could create a three-foot-long "ocean" over the entire surface of the moon.

• How much water is there on the moon?

Unfortunately, although this study shows that the interior of the moon contains much more water than assumed, it is difficult to say exactly how much water there is on the moon. Research from 2011 shows that the volcanic pearls contain the same amount of water as volcanic basalt rocks on earth. And deep in our planet, there is probably more water than all the oceans, lakes, and rivers on earth combined. The new findings could mean that part of the moon, or perhaps even all of the moon, contains as much water as the earth.

What we can see with the naked eye, are the dark areas on the moon. It seems like we can imagine a face with eyes, nose, and mouth. [GGJ4-107: 2,3] These areas were called "Mare", which comes from "lake" or "sea". Etymologically, Mare or Mère [French] also means "mother" - on the other hand, "bitter". Sometimes the names are given soul-wise. Also here we see the resemblance to bitter matter [Materias, Mara]. The material power of Mother Earth froze and she is always forced to hang over Mother Earth. [Note: because we came into being out of the sea [the mother, the clay].

*What many readers may not know [not even I personally until recently! G] that the actual moon is not the back of the moon, but the front:

As far as the moon is concerned, it is a solid world body, even more so than your earth, and is in a way a child of the earth, i.e. it is formed from the constituents of the earth. She is attached to the earth so that she catches the magnetic force flowing out from the earth and then leads it back again according to the needs of the earth, for which reason her course around the earth is just as dissolute. Because this always depends on the larger or smaller quantity of the magnetism present on earth; On the contrary, however, the course of the moon, as the carrier of this substance, also depends on the earth's possible need for this natural substance. - That is the main function of the moon.

If a planet is smaller than the earth, it does not need a moon. The place of the moon is then represented by very high mountains, which is the case, for example, with Venus, Mercury, Mars and some much smaller planets. But what the larger planets are, they must be provided with one or more moons to provide their planets the already announced service.

In the moon, as on earth, there are people and countless other creatures, only with the difference that no moon is inhabited on the same side that is constantly facing the planet, but always on the opposite side, because it is on the planet, on the other hand, is provided neither with air, nor water, nor fire and everything necessary for organic life.

You will ask: why so? - The answer is: Because no moon is allowed to move around its own axis - and that because the attraction of the earth or any planet in general is still too powerful at a distance from its moon. If the moon had a rotation around its own axis - no matter how slow it was - then such a rotation would initially strengthen the attractive force of the planet in the ratio of the rotation of the moon to the rotation of the planet, That is, if the moon in its rotation were to approximate the rotation of the earth in a timely manner so that it rotated around its axis at approximately the same time as the planet, then one part after the other of the moon would soon be due to the increasing gravitational pull of the planet. It would peel off and fall to the ground. It would be of very little use to the moon with a rotation as slow as the planet has, in terms of the relative distribution of air, water and thus also fire, and everything would still be as it is now, namely on the opposite side of the planet. For the water, the air and the fire must be driven around on a celestial body at a relative speed through the outstanding mountains; otherwise, these elements so necessary for organic life would accumulate on the side opposite of the central body by virtue of momentum and their own fluid weight.

But if this were the case, ask yourself: Who could live on such a world body? He would only live as long as he was under the layers of air and water; but if the planet were to turn out of this, it would necessarily have to suffocate in the vacuum if it had not already been drowned under the water layer.

Now see, that would also be the case with the moon if it had only as slow a rotation as the earth! To properly distribute the air, the water, and the fire on its surface, it would have to rotate around its axis five times faster, that is: it would have to rotate around its own axis five times in 24 earth hours, which then is nothing else than that would result in the complete annihilation of the moon after five years, and the earth would be littered with lunar particles. But what effect the masses tumbling down from the moon to earth would produce, I do not need to specify that to you, I just say so much that nobody would stay alive there.

If you pay attention to this a little sensibly, you will understand why the moon has no rotation and therefore always only turns one and the same side of the earth.

But for you to fully understand the moon and its habitability, you must know that the moon is actually only the "moon" on the side facing the planet; on the opposite side, however, it is not "moon", but a very solid part of the world. So what "moon" is not fixed, but very looseley, almost like a somewhat solid foam of the sea, whose solid parts protrude like mountains, but whose softer parts have sunk like niches and funnels towards the center of the whole cosmic body. In some of them, there is still atmospheric air that cannot yet give way, which, when viewed through powerful telescopes, looks almost as if it were water.

All the hights, as well as the less deep funnels, have absolutely no atmospheric air, but only ether, as found in the free spaces between the sun and the planets. This side of the moon [the side we see from the Earth] is therefore also not inhabited by any organic being, but its inhabitants are of a spiritual kind. These spiritual inhabitants were pure world addicts in their physical life and are now banished there to improve so that they can still gawk sufficiently at the world in this way.

And when, after a considerable period of time, they become aware that the worldly affection is bearing no fruit and they lend a hearing to the teachers sent there, those willing to act are immediately led from there to a higher, blissful level of freedom; The less obedient, however, are again put on with bodies on the earth of the moon and have to get by very poorly and miserably. At first, you have to struggle with the great cold and darkness, but for the second you also have to fight with unbearable heat; because the night lasts almost 14 full earth days and the day again as long.

Towards the end of each night, it becomes as cold there as on earth at the north pole, and around the middle and towards the end of the day it becomes so hot that no living being can stand it on the surface. [Earth and Moon, Part 2, Chapter.1: 9]

The moon itself [the visible front!] Is therefore an even more solid part than our earth. That is why even the most stubborn material souls on earth go there, after they have died!

What is the back of the moon made of? This is a hilly mountain country.

According to Lorber, there are two types of spirit beings that live there, or even three: One type lives as a stubborn soul spirit, clothed with an etheric body, on the side that is visible to us. The second species on the back of the moon, clothed with a physical body the size of a child.

They have the gift of clairvoyance and because of the harsh and bitter primitive conditions, there have to be incarnated on earth as quickly as possible and have to spend thousands of years there before they are 'purified'.

The inhabitants of the moon, as very simple and inward- turned people, have the predominant gift of being clairvoyant, and this especially during their full fourteen earth-day long nights, which they mainly spend sleeping in their underground dwelling caves.

During this sleep their souls nevertheless stay fully awake and see everything far and wide around them and thus also this earth, to which they more or less belong, however, which they never can see in their awakened state during their long day because of the position of the moon; since the moon-people only live on that part of the moon which is turned away from the earth and not on the earth facing side of the moon, since the earth facing side of the moon, as I have explained it to you, due to very natural reasons has no air and no water, and even if there exists a type of air in the many deepenings, it is not sufficient for breathing of beings living in the flesh and is also not suitable for that purpose because of the total absence of the element of salt (oxygen) in it.

In their natural state the moon people do not have a longing for it, since in their dream life which they like most, they can see and experience anyway everything suitable for the salvation of their souls. Thereby they mostly obtain the desire to become inhabitants of this earth as soon as possible, which is also actually their destiny. And if they have shed their bodies in their world, their souls wander immediately to this earth, if they have made themselves worthy for it during their flesh-life, and are immediately fathered into a mother's womb at an appropriate opportunity on this earth, and are then born as children of this earth and grow up and enjoy the upbringing of the earth-people, whereby they at least attain the ability, to either already here or in the beyond be placed on the path of the children of God [GGJE-120:6,7]

So there are also many souls who had to walk the path through matter [minerals, plants, various animals - finally a human soul!] - some of them are not incarnated on earth [for very wise reasons by God's hand] but on the back of the moon. After throwing away their bodies on earth, they can incarnate on earth and reach the childhood of God. So there is a difference between incarnated earth beings who are placed on the moon and can never again reach the childhood of God, but a certain bliss on other [spiritual] planets. [and so forth...]

Tahiti is home to the largest Chinese community in the South Pacific. The Moon sprang from this area billions of years ago! So the main birth canal was in the middle of the Pacific Ocean. Then the child of the earth was born: the Moon. [Earth and Moon, chap.13:10-11] – That has great spiritual significance for the entire Universe.

In the link above we find many photos taken of the moon, also on the back. Highly interesting!

The composition of the moon was hurled nearly 400,000 kilometers into the air by pressure from the Earth's interior – billions of years ago – with incredible force and pressure.

Lucifer lives in the interior of the Earth and her possible habitat could be there. Also because there are frequent volcanic eruptions. The mountains there have a volcanic consistency.

Tahiti, the volcanic island.
